LAW SCHOOL NEWS

College of Law: On February 27, 2003, the Honorable Frank H. Easterbrook delivered the second annual Henry Lecture entitled "Judicial Discretion in Statutory Interpretation," in the recently completed Chapman Reading Room at the OU College of Law. Judge Easterbrook currently serves on the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. After graduating from the University of Chicago Law School in 1973, Judge Easterbrook served as a law clerk to the Honorable Levin H. Campbell of the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit. He then joined the Solicitor General's office, where he worked first as assistant to the solicitor general and later as deputy solicitor general. Before being appointed to the bench in 1985, Judge Easterbrook was the Lee and Brena Freeman Professor of Law at the University of Chicago Law School. Throughout his distinguished career, Judge Easterbrook has made important contributions to the areas of antitrust law, criminal law and procedure, corporate law, and the study of law and economics.

The Henry Lecture is the creation of the Honorable Robert H. Henry, United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, and the lecture provides a forum for public discourse about the role of the law in conjunction with other disciplines of study. The lecture honors the remarkable public service of all five Henry family members who graduated from the OU College of Law, including Judge Lloyd Harlan Henry, Judge Charles Thomas Henry, Lloyd Wayne Henry, and Governor Charles Bradford Henry.
